Instructions for completing Owner Certification of Occupancy

Owners of property financed under the MaineHousing programs must meet certain rent and income restrictions during the qualified project period as defined in the Financial Assistance Agreement (FAA) or Declaration of Covenants. In order to monitor this, tenant income certification forms are required.

MaineHousing requires yearly third party verifications of income supported by documentation for all applicants applying for rent-restricted units for all funding sources except FedHome funds. If a project has FedHome funds the project will need to obtain third party verifications at initial certification with five years of self-certification and on the sixth year full verifications.

The FAA states the number of rent-restricted units, which must meet the low-income eligibility requirement for the qualified project period. The qualified project period is the period of time that the owner must maintain the rent-restricted units.
